

Epsilon Intellectual Property Rights Notice

The data which the Wallace Correspondence Project has contributed to Epsilon are copyright of its creators and may not be reproduced in any form without permission from the appropriate rights holders. Copyright of metadata (including letter summaries) contributed to Epsilon by the Wallace Correspondence Project is owned by the Alfred Russel Wallace Trust. For information about the copyright of Alfred Russel Wallace's unpublished literary works see <http://wallacefund.info/arws-literary-estate>

Nothing in these terms is intended to reduce, limit, or restrict any 'Acts Permitted' in the UK Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988 or other limitations on the exclusive rights of the copyright owner under copyright law or other applicable laws.

Please note that the Wallace Correspondence Project no longer has control of our former online archive, Wallace Letters Online. It is on the London Natural History Museum's server and any complaints related to it should be directed to the Museum authorities.

Notice and Takedown Policy

Every reasonable effort has been made to locate, contact, and acknowledge owners of the copyright of document transcripts on Epsilon. To help us in this effort we welcome any information that might lead us to make proper attributions, identify copyright owners, or correct copyright acknowledgments.

If you are a rights holder and are concerned that you have found material on Epsilon which you have not given us permission to use, then please contact us in writing (contact details are below) and state the following:

- Your contact details
- The nature of your complaint
- The full bibliographical details of the material
- The URL where you found the material
- An assertion that your complaint is made in good faith and is accurate
- A statement and any proof you can provide that you are the rights holder or are an authorised representative thereof

Upon receipt of the above, the Wallace Correspondence Project will acknowledge receipt of your complaint by email or letter and will make an initial assessment of the validity and plausibility of the complaint, possibly taking legal advice. The material will be temporarily removed from Epsilon pending an agreed solution. If the complaint is valid and an agreed-upon solution cannot be reached, the material will be permanently removed from Epsilon.
